

GRAVESIDE

Some doors open from the other side.

TV-MA · 60 Minutes · 15 Episodes Per Season · Three-Season Arc

— SERIES LOGLINE —

A trauma surgeon and a genealogist — two people drawn together by an inexplicable obsession with the dead — discover that certain cemeteries hold a door neither of them chose to open. Pulled into the lives of the buried, they experience history's darkest stories from opposing sides, powerless to change a single outcome but not powerless to act on what they witness. As they begin anonymously surfacing buried crimes with living consequences, someone in the present starts noticing the impossible specificity of what they know — and the slow collision between the door they opened and the world they live in becomes as dangerous as anything they've witnessed in the past.

Two people obsessed with cemetery history get exactly what they wished for — and spend three seasons trying to survive what they found.

THE COUPLE

DR. MARA VOSS

Trauma Surgeon, 36

ELI COLE

Forensic Genealogist, 38

Together three years. Met at a cemetery.

United by grief they haven't fully named and a hobby that just became something else entirely.

THE MECHANISM

They touch the headstone.

They go back.

They inhabit real people from opposing sides of the same dark story. They cannot change a single outcome. They return at the moment of death carrying everything they witnessed.

THE STAKES

They're using what they know.

Physical evidence. Impossible specificity.

Anonymous tips delivering justice across a century. And someone has started noticing the pattern. The door they opened is about to open wider.

*Six Feet Under's emotional architecture · Yellowjackets' dread · Deadwood's period savagery
A conspiracy thriller assembling itself in the present · Dark humor running underneath everything like a fault line*
